

First World War Memorial Walk

Please note that some paths in the Cemetery are fairly steep so suitable footwear and a reasonable standard of fitness is required.

It is recommended that you follow the markers in numerical order. If starting at the lower end, just follow them in reverse. Three of the memorials (10/11 and 12) are in the steepest part of the cemetery. If you wish to by-pass this section, after 9 take the overbridge to complete the lower cemetery tour (17-13) in the reverse direction.

Bolton Street Cemetery ANZAC CHALLENGE

This self-guided walk will take you around the memorials in the Cemetery marked with white crosses for the men who joined up to fight in the Great War and, in most cases, never returned home. Many of these are on minor tracks, so your challenge is to try to find them all.

After the Cemetery was closed in 1890, burials continued to be allowed in family plots. The 17 servicemen with white crosses were related to people already buried here. In many cases the memorials are on their parents' graves. Only William Rhodes-Moorhouse is not named on his grandfather's memorial in the Cemetery.
